Spill Database Search Results for East Waterway and Associated Drainage Basins

Introduction:

Spills information is useful to assess the frequency, volume, and location of spills that have occurred both directly to the East Waterway (EW), and those that have occurred within the EW drainage basins that may have contributed pollutants to the combined sewer overflow (CSO) and storm drain (SD) pathways. Spills are tracked by federal, state, and local spill reporting systems. Information in these systems is stored in searchable databases, such as the federal Emergency Response Notification System maintained by the U.S. Coast Guard (USCG); the spills database maintained by the Washington State Department of Ecology's (Ecology's) Spill Prevention, Preparedness, and Response Program; and the database maintained by the City of Seattle's (City's) spill response program. These databases were queried by Environmental Data Resources in 2007 in support of the EW Existing Information Summary Report (EISR) (Anchor and Windward 2008), and again in December 2009 in support of this Supplemental Remedial Investigation (SRI) Report. Ecology and the City's spill response system were re-queried during January 2013 to include more recent spills. The spills databases do not always report the type of material spilled, the quantity of material spilled, whether the spill actually discharged to a drainage feature, to which drainage system the spill was released to (CSO or SD), and other relevant details.

Description of Databases Used to Compile Table E-1

ERNS (Emergency Response Notification System Sites)

This database provides data on toxic chemical spills, oil spills, transportation accidents involving oil or chemicals, accidents involving chemicals (such as fires or explosions), releases of radioactive materials, sightings of oil sheens on bodies of water, discovery of illegally dumped chemicals, terrorist incidents involving chemicals, and other accidents report to the National Response Center (NRC). The NRC is operated by the USCG, and has become the central point of contact used for reporting a variety of incidents involving hazardous materials.

The spills in this database were updated on January 10, 2012, and include events from 1982 through 2011. The severity of the spills reported varies from minor to serious. While the reports are extensive, they are also incomplete as a result of unreported events and no verification on reported events. ERNS data can be obtained at www.nrc.uscg.mil. The database is no longer known as ERNS; it is now accessed by Freedom of Information Act request to the National Response Center data.

Information obtained from: <http://rtknet.ombwatch.org/db/erns/about>

Reported Spills

National Response Center (NRC) online query system compiles reported oil and chemical spill data. The NRC is not involved in the investigation or incident response and it does not verify or do any follow-up on spills reported. Federal and state On-scene Coordinators are contacted by the NRC to respond to the reported spill.

TCRIS (Toxic Chemical Release Inventory System)

TCRIS is a database containing data on disposal or other releases of more than 650 toxic chemicals from thousands of United States facilities. It also includes information about how facilities manage the chemicals through treatment, recycling, and energy recovery. Information obtained from: <http://www.epa.gov/tri/>

City of Seattle

Incidents that are reported to the City of Seattle are relevant to surface water pollution and include leaking automobiles, concrete dumped on the street, and paint poured down a drain. Information obtained from: http://www.seattle.gov/util/Services/Drainage\_&\_Sewer/Keep\_Water\_Safe\_&\_Clean/RestoreOurWaters/PreventPollution/Reportspills/index.htm

Ecology (Washington State Department of Ecology) Spills Database

Ecology has online databases for environmental monitoring data that provide a comprehensive list of environmental data sources. Information obtained from: <http://www.ecy.wa.gov/databases/spills.html>

Table E-1, Map ID 118, Spill #2: 50,000 gallons F006 waste

A waste water storage tank failed causing a release of F006 waste water onto the pavement and into a storm drain on March 26, 2008. This spill occurred due to equipment failure.

More details are available in Section 9.4.2 of the SRI and at the following web address:

Table E-1, Map ID 123, Spill #9: 42 gallons including silver

“Caller stated that employees were off-loading some photo waste from a cruise ship on the dock and there was an accidental spill of photo chemicals into a storm drain.” Storage tank spill due to operator error affecting area storm drain.
